SOVIET CHECKS GERMAN ADVANCE

Plans Balked for Quick Action on Tax Measure

CHURCHILL SCORES PRODUCTION CRITICS

Warns German Invasion Is Coming in Autumn; Has High Praise for America

Declares United States Is Giving Aid on a Gigantic Scale Now; Says Worst Is Not Over Yet

LONDON, July 29 (AP)—Winston Churchill told the British in a thunderous outpouring of words today that the United States "is giving us aid on a gigantic scale and is advancing in rising wrath and conviction to the very verge of war" on Germany. But he warned his people solemnly that they must count on their strength to repel any September invasion gambit by Germany.

Successfully, he defended his government's direction of industry and labor toward total war organization in a long and trenchant speech which inundated all but the sharpest peaks of parliamentary criticism. He ended on a high note of resolve to, if need be, "proffer the last drop of our heart's blood" for Britain.

Challenges Commons
The prime minister refused flatly to name a super-minister of production, which a large number of his press and parliamentary critics had demanded. He declared such an appointment would be a "fake and fraud on the public" and challenged the House of Commons to a vote of confidence on the matter.

The debate on production ended quickly without a vote and thus Churchill won a more decisive political victory than any vote of confidence would have been, parliamentary experts declared.

Along with his appraisal of the aid of the United States, the prime minister said "mighty Russia, so treacherously assaulted, has struck back with magnificent strength and courage and brought prodigious and well-deserved slaughter on the Nazi armies." But he added:

"All the massive and towering facts which we are entitled to dwell upon must not lead us for a moment to propose that the worst is over."

"The formidable power of Nazi Germany, the vast mass of destructive munitions which they have made or captured, the courage, skill and audacity of their striking forces, the ruthlessness of their centralized war direction, the prostrate condition of so many great peoples under their yoke, the resources of many lands which may to some extent become available to them, all these restrain rejoicing and forbid the slightest relaxation."

"It would be madness for us to suppose that Russia or the United States are going to win this war for us. The invasion season is at hand. All the armed forces have been warned to be at constant pitch by Sept. 1 and to maintain the utmost vigilance meanwhile. We have to reckon with a gambler's desperation."

Campaign Is Opened by Germany For Sympathy in South America

BERLIN, July 29 (AP)—Germany opened a general campaign for South American sympathy today by advising all Latin-American governments in an identical note that she regards the Bolivian Belmonte note as a forgery.

By order of the Reich's government, said this communication, "I (the German representative in each case) have the honor to bring to your attention the attached copy of a note which the German Charge D'affaires in La Paz directed to the Bolivian government because of its action against the German minister there."

Japanese Navy Steams toward Indo-China in Aggressive Mood

Newspaper Correspondent Aboard Warship Writes "Clear the Way, Disturbers of the Peace"

TOKYO, Wednesday, July 30.—The Dutch East Indies government which suspended a trade agreement providing huge oil deliveries to Japan was described today by an angry press as a "tool" of the United States.

There were warnings that "Japan's patience is not endless."

The newspaper Nichi Nichi said "Japan is unlikely to be reckless at a time of crisis, but will stake her national existence if necessary, regardless of consequences."

The Japanese news agency Domei told the Japanese that the movement into French Indo-China was designed to "collapse Chungking on the one hand and on the other to check the scheme of the United States and Britain—now pulling wires behind the scene at Chungking."

Japanese naval forces steamed southward today for the occupation of French Indo-China in an aggressive mood which a Japanese correspondent aboard a warship epitomized this way:

"Clear the way, disturbers of the peace; let us protect Indo-China from international intrigue!"

This was the overwhelming sentiment of the navy as described in radioed dispatches from correspondent Fusuo Oya and published by the authoritative news agency Domei.

Here in the capital, even United States economic measures against Japan took second place in the press to news from Batavia that the Dutch East Indies had ended the agreement for large oil shipments to Japan.

This action of the Dutch Colonial Government (which will permit shipments of oil only under specific government approval) followed closely upon new and stricter rationing of gasoline for the relatively few private cars operating. It seemed likely that taxicabs would be limited to seven gallons of gasoline a month, beginning in August.

Reich Calls Attention of Governments to "Forged Note"

BERLIN, July 29 (AP)—Germany called attention of governments to a "forged note" which the German Charge D'affaires in La Paz directed to the Bolivian government because of its action against the German minister there.

The Reich's government regards it advisable to direct the attention of the government to the incident described in the note, which is unprecedented in international intercourse.

U. S. Ships Drop Depth Charges off Coast of Greenland

Action Taken in Belief Enemy Submarine Was nearby, Senate Told

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—The Senate received a formal report today of an incident near Greenland in which a United States destroyer dropped three depth charges in the belief that a submerged submarine was nearby.

The incident was related to the Senate Naval committee on July 11 by Navy Secretary Knox in secret session, and the testimony was made public by the committee in a report to the Senate.

The report showed that Secretary Knox declared there was no other basis for published reports of engagements between United States naval units and no truth.

Promise of Relief From Heat Wave Cheers Millions

Cool Front which Forms in West Is Moving Eastward Now

Millions of heat-harried Americans were cheered last (Tuesday) night by word that relief was on the way.

Forecasters reported that a cool front had formed in North Dakota and Minnesota and predicted that it would cover the entire Midwest by tonight and move Eastward through the Ohio valley tomorrow (Thursday).

But thermometers registered around 100 in many cities as a sweating citizenry waited for relieving breeze to rush to the rescue on waves of thundershowers.

The count of the dead proceeded apace. Fatalities attributed to the heat wave—in its ninth day in some places—numbered 137. Drownings rose to 144. The total was 281.

First to enjoy a return to temperate weather were Minnesota and the Dakotas. Temperatures there dropped to the 80's. Rains lowered Ohio temperatures to the same levels. Marks in the low 70's were recorded in Eastern Pennsylvania in the wake of a storm that hovered in the middle 60's in the Western counties of the same state.

Prairie states remained on the steam heat standard. Readings included: Fredonia, Kan., 109. Ponca City, Okla., 101. Iowa City, Iowa, 100.

WAVE OF REVOLT IN CONGRESS CAUSES DELAY IN PROCEEDINGS

Leaders Suddenly Postpone Debate until Later; Agree to Changes

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—A wave of revolt in Congress today balked plans for quick action on the $3,529,000,000 tax bill, threatened to throw administration crop controls away, and apparently killed legislation permitting the president to take over factories in which production stoppages impede the defense program.

The defense tax bill, biggest revenue measure, was scheduled to come up in the House for debate today, but Democratic leaders suddenly postponed debate until later in the week because they feared the chamber would refuse to ratify procedure drastically limiting amendments.

Under the procedure, no amendments could be offered except those approved by the House Ways and Means committee. Critics had described this as "a gag rule" and Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, the House Republican leader, jubilantly explained that "they haven't got the votes" to adopt the procedure.

Agree On Changes
Later in the day the House Democratic leaders went into a huddle and agreed to liberalize the procedure somewhat. They decided to

President Repudiates Suggestion U. S. "Take Over" Latin America

Roosevelt Expresses Hope Senator Clark Won't Be Taken Seriously

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt and the State Department hastened today to repudiate a suggestion by Senator Clark (D-Iowa) that the United States "take over control" of Latin America and Canada, perhaps by setting up puppet governments.

The president, at his press conference, expressed hope that none of the United States' good friends in Latin America would take Clark seriously.

Summer Welles, acting secretary of state, strongly defended the "good neighbor policy," which Clark had described as a failure, and said that Clark's suggestion for taking over the countries was "unbelievable."

He added that the senator's view was "not shared by any responsible authority in the government" and was "utterly at variance" with administration policy.

Clark had suggested that the United States should set up puppet governments "which we could trust to put American interests ahead of those of Germany or any other nation in the world."

Slimson Makes Public Apology To Sen. Wheeler

Concedes Anti-War Cards Not Intended Specifically for Soldiers

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—Secretary of War Slimson, conceding that Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) did not intend to direct anti-war postcards specifically to soldiers, apologized publicly tonight for his statement of last week that Wheeler's activities constituted "near treason."

At the same time Slimson said that "not three but several hundred of the circulars" reached the soldiers in camps and that an inquiry had developed "evidence of organized attempts, by other persons, to arouse disloyalty on the part of the soldiers in the cantonments towards the training plans of their officers."

Slimson issued the following statement through the press relations officer at the War Department:

Slimson's Statement
"An inquiry now being made by the War Department of the post-offices of the larger cantonments of the army indicates that not three but at least several hundred of the circulars sent out by Senator Wheeler did reach soldiers of the United States army."

"The inquiry has also developed evidence of organized attempts, by other persons, to arouse disloyalty on the part of the soldiers in the cantonments towards the training plans of their officers. The danger to the national defense of such attempts is obvious and will receive the careful attention of the department."

"On the basis of Senator Wheeler's statement in the Senate as to the time and method of the issuance of his circular, I believe that he has shown the absence of any intent on his part to circularize the soldiers in the training camps. I am sorry that on the basis of incomplete evidence, I made a statement last week which carried a contrary implication."

Wheeler Is Advised
Advised of Slimson's apology, Wheeler said only that he thought it was "a very decent thing for him to do."

Slimson read his earlier statement about Wheeler to a press conference last Thursday at the same time displaying two post cards received by soldiers in which they were urged to write the president and congressmen opposing entry into the war. Slimson termed Wheeler's activity in sending the cards an action "that

Germans Announce Sinking of Convoy

Running Fight Results in Sinking of Twenty-One British Ships

BERLIN, July 29 (AP)—A running fight lasting for days between German submarines protected by so-called "safety craft" and a British Atlantic convoy has resulted in the destruction of twenty-one British ships, Adolf Hitler's headquarters announced in a special communique tonight.

The "safety craft" themselves sank one British destroyer and one corvette, while the submarines sent to the bottom 116,500 tons of British merchant shipping, the announcement said.

Herding the feat as "a big success in the Battle of the Atlantic," the high command said that the submarines sank the ships despite being "hard-pressed by destroyers, corvettes, submarine traps and auxiliary cruisers."

Except to state that it lasted for days, the special communique gave no further details of the battle but previously a military spokesman had indicated that the clashes began early Monday morning and continued through last night.

Informed quarters explained that the "safety craft" discharged "well-aimed torpedoes" which sank the destroyer and the corvette in a few minutes. No precise description of the boats was released.

Russian Counter Attacks Spread over Whole Front As Nazi Divisions Retreat

U. S. Keeps Japan In the Dark on Future Shipments Of Oil to Nippon

Retain Full Freedom To Act against Any Japanese Ships Entering American Ports

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP)—The United States kept Japan completely in the dark tonight on the future of oil and other exports from this country while retaining full freedom to act against any Japanese ships which come into American ports.

President Roosevelt, adopting a cautious attitude on the Far East, refused at his press conference to indicate how rigidly economic sanctions would be applied against Japan.

He said the Japanese move into French Indo-China, which the United States government denounced last week, was still a very current matter and that it was best not to discuss the question of an oil embargo or other export control restrictions.

Asked whether he thought the situation in the Pacific had become more serious than that in the Atlantic from an American point of view, the president said he would not make comparisons.

At the State department, Acting Secretary Sumner Welles said the government's policy under present conditions was to permit normal procedure with regard to facilitating clearance of Japanese ships from American ports.

But he emphasized that all transactions involving their cargoes and even the purchase of food for the crews, fuel and ship stores of all kinds were subject to individual licenses under last Friday's freezing order against Japanese assets.

Welles said no assurances whatever had been given to Japan concerning the granting of these licenses. Whether Japanese ships more than forty of which have been hovering off the Pacific coast for several days, would risk entry into port remained to be seen.

As officials weighed the question of whether Japan would move farther south in the Pacific or north against Russia, Welles conferred during the day with both the Russian ambassador, Constantin Oumansky, and the Netherlands minister, Alexander Loudon.

Loudon told newsmen that the Netherlands East Indies, which has suspended an oil agreement with Japan, would effectively destroy its

Commandant of Brooklyn Navy Yard Requests End of Electrical Strike

Work Stoppage Disrupts $17,000,000 Program of Expansion

NEW YORK, July 29 (AP)—Rear Admiral F. J. Marquart, commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, appealed today to the striking Local 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) to end a navy yard stoppage which had disrupted a $17,000,000 expansion program. The strike was city-wide in scope.

He announced at a press conference that he had asked Harry Van Arsdale, Jr., union business manager, to send back to their jobs more than 200 skilled electricians, including work on drydocks for the construction of two new 58,000-ton super battleships.

One Project Tied Up
"If the rear admiral would ask us to send men back to the navy yard," the spokesman said, "there is no question but what the request would be taken under advisement by the executive board. As it is, we are taking no action."

Marquart said the only project completely tied up was the construction of a sixteen-story storage house which has been built up to the eighth floor. Six other buildings he added had been affected to various degrees.

Several hundred other construction projects, principally non-defense were tied up by the city-wide strike, engineered by a jurisdictional dispute between the union

German Units Reported Thrown Back at Some Points 100 Miles from Positions Once Reached

MOSCOW, Wednesday, July 30. (AP)—The German advance generally has been checked and Nazi divisions in many places have been forced into retreat, the Soviet Government said today as the Red Army announced it had thrown the Germans out of their trenches in the Smolensk sector on the front before Moscow.

Vice Commissar for foreign affairs S. A. Lovotsky, who also is official spokesman for the press, declared that leading Reichswehr units had been driven into retreat, by strong Soviet tank forces.

Unofficial advisers reported that at some points German units had been thrown back as much as 100 miles from positions once reached by Nazi spearheads.

Recapture City
One large scale Red Army offensive was reported in which the Russians recaptured City "N" from the German invaders after a two-day battle involving infantry, artillery and armored forces.

Lovotsky, giving an official analysis of the situation on the long, bloody front, declared that more than 2,000,000 men were locked in battle with the lines awaiting in a highly mobile campaign of attack and counter attack.

This sixth week of the war, he said, is characterized by mobility, and there are no signs anywhere of a "frozen front." Trenches have been dug in some sectors, he said, but they are intended as springboards for action and not for positional warfare.

A series of Russian counter attacks, said Lovotsky, have hurled the Germans back in their main drives, and action is continuing along the front at other places on the flanks in the German rear.

Some German units were reported encircled. Despite German claims of destruction of the Russian Air Force and tank power and manpower, Lovotsky declared that "we still have enough to spare of all of these."

Nazi Losses Heavy
The Red Army in its daily communique announced that the Germans were thrown out of their trenches in the vital Smolensk area in particularly heavy fighting Monday and Tuesday during which Nazi losses were heavy.

Today's communique mentioned fighting particularly at Novozyorsk, in the path of the German drive on Leningrad; at Nevel, about seventy-five miles to the South, at Smolensk and at Zhitomir, where the Russians are defending the route to Kiev and the Ukraine.

On other sectors there were scouting activities and engagements of local character, the communique said.

Conlon To Head State's Council, Walsh Decides

Holds Legislative Group Lacks Power To Elect New Chairman

BALTIMORE, July 29 (P)—Lacking a chairman, Maryland's Legislative Council must be presided over until the next session of the General Assembly by Vice Chairman Thomas E. Conlon, the attorney general's office ruled today.

An opinion handed down by Attorney General William C. Walsh and Deputy William L. Henderson, held that the Legislative Council does not possess the power to elect a new chairman "where the vice-chairman designated by the statute is eligible to serve x x x."

The question of the chairmanship arose when Senate President Arthur H. Brice resigned his membership on the council. Brice was appointed a member of the Public Service Commission by Governor O'Connor after the adjournment of the legislature. He had been chairman of the Legislative Council since it was organized.

Following Brice's resignation, Senator John B. Funk, (D-Fredrick) was elected to the council vacancy, and Senator Dudley G. Roe (D-Queen Anne's) was elected as head of the senate group of members of the council.

Ruling Requested

The question then arose as to whether Roe automatically became council chairman, or whether Conlon, speaker of the House and vice-chairman of the council, should be elevated to the chairmanship. A ruling was asked of the attorney general by Dr. Horace E. Plack, council secretary.

The attorney general's opinion, in addition to ruling that the council does not have power to select a new chairman, held that the vice-chairman does not become the chairman, but should act as presiding officer in his capacity as vice-chairman until the next meeting of the General Assembly, and that the office of chairman will remain vacant until that time.

Membership of the council was strictly prescribed in the 1939 law establishing the body.

Members from the Senate include the president, the chairman of the finance committee, the chairman of the judicial proceedings committee and the floor leader of the minority party, serving ex officio.

New Subsection Passed

House members include the speaker, the chairman of the ways and means committee and the floor leader of the minority party, also serving ex officio. The law also provides for the appointment of three additional members from each branch to be named by the Senate president and the House speaker, subject to majority approval.

The law prescribes that the Senate president shall be chairman of the council, and the speaker of the House its vice-chairman.

No provision was made in the original law for the selection of new members, but the 1941 legislature passed a new subsection providing:

"Any vacancy occurring in the membership of the council while the General Assembly is not in session shall be filled by appointment by the president of the Senate or the speaker of the House from the roster of members of the branch in which the vacancy occurred."

Opinion Is Cited

The amendment also provides that in the event of the resignation of the Senate president or the speaker of the House, the vacancy shall be filled by the members of the council from the membership of the Senate or the House.

The attorney general's opinion held that this amendment was designed to fill vacancies in the council membership, and that "it does not confer any authority on the council to select its presiding officers."

"On the contrary, the section retains the specific direction as to chairman and vice chairman. Since there is no member of the council who can now act as chairman ex officio, we are of the opinion that the vice-chairman, as next in order, should act in his stead."

"If there were neither a chairman nor vice-chairman who could answer the statutory description, it may be that the council would possess the inherent power of any deliberative body to select a presiding officer pro tem, but where the statute fixes the order it must be observed."

Baby Thought Dead By Mother, Lives 30 Hours Alone

PIKEVILLE, Ky., July 29 (P)—Pike county authorities considered tonight seeking foster parents for a new born baby girl found alive thirty hours after her mother had disposed of her supposedly dead body.

Coroner W. P. Call, who found that the baby was alive when he was called for a routine investigation, said the infant was a normal 6 1/2-pound girl. He said she would recover.

County authorities said the child was born entirely unattended, last Friday to a young girl whom they declined to identify. They said the mother told them that, believing the child dead, she had wrapped it in flour sacks and disposed of it.

The child had received no medical attention of any kind during her first thirty hours of life. She was found Saturday near the Ped's Creek high school, near the Kentucky-Virginia border, and taken to a Pikeville hospital.

In reports that American naval vessels had escorted British Merchantmen.

Knox and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, were questioned when the committee considered a resolution by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) proposing an investigation of the reports.

After citing the statements of Knox and Stark, the committee said it believed no further investigation was necessary "as the preliminary hearings covered the subject by a detailed examination of naval officials who were in a position to furnish the committee with the facts."

Here is Secretary Knox' account of the depth bomb incident:

"One United States destroyer operating off Greenland heard the SOS of a steamer and proceeded to the location and picked up 60 of the survivors of the steamer."

"While engaged in this act of mercy the operator of the listening equipment reported to the captain that he thought he heard a submerged submarine. The captain immediately turned toward the direction indicated and dropped three depth charges."

"In doing this, he very prudently exercised the right of self-preservation, for had there been a submarine there, his destroyer might have been sunk."

"There was no other evidence that a submarine was there, and it is quite possible no submarine was there. The listening equipment 'echo' might have been received from a whale or a large fish, or a cold current, instead of a submarine—something which is frequently experienced."

"Now, none of them knew whether there was a sub there or not, but the man in command did what any man would do who was on the verge of an attack by a submarine. He would do it in self-defense."

Knox asserted in commenting on another report, that "we have never sunk any submarines."

"And we can assure the American people," Chairman Walsh (D-Mass.) asked, "that there is not an undeclared war, a hidden war, or a naval war as far as we are concerned."

"That is right," was the secretary's reply.

livia in the event an international incident arose from the expulsion of the German minister. The expulsion followed the suppression of an alleged Nazi camp in Bolivia.

In Berlin authorized German sources asserted today that the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities was responsible for the action of an Argentine congressional committee in having German diplomatic pouches seized.

Welles declined direct comment on any of the German charges but struck at "totalitarian" moves in this hemisphere in a statement concerning the blacklisting of more than 1,800 firms and individuals in Latin America.

The black list, issued on July 17, was modified today by the removal of some forty firms and Welles said other changes would be made from time to time.

He declared the publication of this list had denied "the benefits of inter-American trade to persons who have hitherto been using large profits to finance subversive activities aimed at undermining the peace and independence of the Western Hemisphere."

Contending that recent events had shown the totalitarian powers were seeking to disturb hemisphere peace and to extend control over Latin American affairs, Welles said:

"Swift action by the governments affected has nipped dangerous plans of the totalitarianists in the bud and indicates the determination of the American republics to defend their integrity and peace."

Berlin Reports Smashing Soviet Railway Attack

Twenty Trains with 1,200 Cars and Thousand Trucks Destroyed

(By The Associated Press) BERLIN, Wednesday, July 30 — A mighty battle of men and machines is underway along a 190-mile front stretching Northeastward beyond Smolensk to pinch off a Nazi Panzer-driven wedge, German dispatches reported early today.

On account of the battle of Tatars, published in Adolf Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, said the Red Army forces under Marshal Semenov Timoshenko, commander of the Soviet Central front, were putting up a stiff but doomed defense of this vital gateway to Moscow.

Battle of Battles

Beobachter said the battle of battles was raging between the towns of Mogilev and Vyazma which are 190 miles apart, and to a depth of ninety miles.

Mogilev is 100 miles Southwest of Smolensk and Vyazma is 10 miles East of Smolensk and only 130 miles from Moscow.

The German army was reported tonight to have virtually annihilated Russian forces encircled in the Smolensk area and to have pressed forward to create chaos in a surprise attack on the multiple track rail line to Moscow.

German advance units, said the official news agency DNB, made the surprise attack east of Smolensk July 26, destroying twenty fully-laden freight trains with 1,200 cars, a thousand trucks and a great mass of Soviet war materials.

Nearby roads were reported jammed with Russian columns when the Germans opened fire, resulting DNB said, "in mad confusion as shells burst among marching troops, trucks caught fire and boxcars loaded with munitions exploded."

83 Tanks Destroyed

Today the Luftwaffe again supported advance units, the agency said, by destroying a number of railway lines with direct hits. Twenty Soviet airplanes were said to have been destroyed on the ground during an attack on one field and many other planes were listed as damaged.

DNB also reported a terrific one-hour battle between Russian tanks and a German anti-tank unit advancing southwest of Smolensk in the Mogilev area Monday, resulting in the destruction of eighty-three Russian tanks.

The high command, reporting progress in each of its four main drives into Russia, stated that the trapped Russians in the Smolensk region "have been virtually wiped out," and informed quarters added that attempts of remaining troops to break out of the ring have been repulsed with bloody losses.

Russians Deserting

Despite unfavorable weather conditions, German and Rumanian troops were credited with a series of victories in localized but bitter fighting. The high command in its daily communique reported that Rumanian troops had gained complete control of Bessarabia.

In further advances in this region, the official news agency DNB said, many thousands of Russians are deserting their own ranks and fleeing into German and Rumanian camps.

Further north, "operations in the Ukraine continued steadily," the high command said, and west of Lake Peipus in the path of the drive on Leningrad Soviet troops are encircled and facing destruction by German forces mopping up Estonia. Still farther north on the Finnish front German and Finnish troops staged a surprise raid which yielded fifty-two Russian cannon, DNB said.

and the city's largest electric power utility, the Consolidated Edison Company.

Union officers were served with a supreme court order, obtained by the New York Electrical Contractors Association, requiring them to show cause Thursday why they should not be restrained from continuing the strike.

8,000 Quit Jobs

Navy yard officials said that a prolonged strike might slow down construction of the super-battleships, the Iowa and the Missouri, inasmuch as the construction schedules were dependent in part upon facilities offered by new buildings affected by the strike. Electrical work on the battle craft was not affected.

Union officials said 8,000 electrical workers quit work throughout the city and that 250,000 building trades workers whose jobs were contingent upon electrical installations might be affected eventually.

The strike, they said, was in protest against the Edison Company's employment of electricians of the Brotherhood of Consolidated Edison Employees, an independent union, on a New Manhattan plant.

Walkouts of electricians were reported at the Brewster Aeronautical Company, the Ford Instrument Company makers of bomb sights and the Robins Drydock in Brooklyn. Brewster and Robins officials said construction was not interrupted. Ford officials declined comment.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Britain's war leaders seem agreed that the season "is at hand" for a Nazi "invasion" of England; but not as to the form that invasion is apt to take.

Prime Minister Churchill, sounding a new alert to parliament, speaks of it as a German military incursion which might come in September. His foreign affairs minister, Anthony Eden, simultaneously predicts a Nazi peace offensive, which apparently is to be based on victories in Russia yet unwon, and which he sternly rejects in advance.

These rather ominous statements might seem to imply that London's information from the German-Russian battle front is not reassuring. Both warnings seem to hinge on the possibility of decisive Nazi victories in Russia within the next month.

Twin Warnings Issued

Certainly England has no reason to fear a September invasion in a military sense unless Red Armies now balking German attackers before Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev are quickly overwhelmed. Nor could Eden's picture of Germany turning westward bearing peace gifts be more realistic if Hitler's troops still permitted the submission of an amendment to strike out a provision of the tax bill requiring husbands and wives to file joint tax returns.

Under present law, husbands and wives in the several "community property" states can file separate returns. This often permits them to pay lower taxes, since the income of each may be subject to lower rates than if they filed joint returns.

The pending bill prohibits the filing of such separate returns, and legislators from community property states have been objecting strenuously. Speaker Rayburn, explaining the move to liberalize the procedure, said "some people opposed to the joint return provision feel they haven't been sufficiently heard."

national interest is imperilled by events abroad and on that basis provide machinery for retaining the men in service after the expiration of the year for which they were inducted originally. Regular army men also could be retained beyond their term of enlistment.

Within the House Committee, however, sentiment developed for a simple authorization for prolonging the training period. Rep. Short (R-Mo.) said seven Republican members of the committee favored such a course.

Opponents Ready

These events developed while Congress awaited a message from President Roosevelt tomorrow setting forth the chief executive's views on price-fixing legislation. Administration leaders in Congress discussed this and other issues with the president during the day.

They would not disclose the specific terms of the proposed legislation but it is expected to include the imposition of maximums on the prices of commodities or groups of commodities, controls on rent increases and machinery for keeping farm prices from rising above the parity level.

In effect, the legislation is intended to give the Office of Price Administration statutory authority for enforcing its price edicts. Heretofore, they have been made operative only through the voluntary cooperation of industries and firms affected.

Production Agreement Sought

During the day William S. Knudsen and Sidney H. Hillman, directors of the Office of Production Management, and Leon Henderson, in charge of Price Controls and Civilian Supplies, endeavored to come to an agreement on how rapidly the production of automobiles should be curtailed and the automobile factories put to producing munitions. The difference of opinion has been principally that Henderson wants the transition made more rapidly than Knudsen and Hillman.

Prince Frederick Fire Damage Set At over $200,000

Four Buildings Destroyed; Apparently Started in Trash Pile

PRINCE FREDERICK, Md., July 29 (P)—Fire still smoldered late today in the ruins of four buildings, destroyed by a blaze that for a time threatened to wipe out the entire business section of this county seat.

A survey of the owners of destroyed property placed the loss at over $200,000.

The fire was discovered shortly before midnight last night by Thomas Parran and Martin O'Neill, driving through the town in separate automobiles. They said it apparently started in a trash pile.

Fanned By Wind

Fanned by a south wind, the flames quickly spread to four buildings as approximately 500 residents formed bucket brigades in an effort to quell the blaze.

Telephone communications within the town were disrupted.

First outside fire fighters to arrive were the volunteers from North Beach, fourteen miles away. They were joined by engines and companies from Upper Marlboro, Gaesville, West Annapolis, La Plata and Mechanicville.

Several thousand persons, including vacationists from towns along the Chesapeake, watched the fire.

Starts in Store

The flames first caught the rear of the A and P store on Main street, a one-story frame building. They then spread to the Prince Frederick department store, the largest mercantile building in town.

A large barn at the rear of the department store caught next, but ten cows and six horses were led to safety. Burning embers were carried onto the roof of another one-story frame structure, occupied as an office by John B. Gray, Jr., an attorney.

The blaze reached its height at about 2 a. m., when a shift in the wind and the efforts of firemen ended the threat to another store and the Calvert hotel, only about sixty feet away.

said, while everywhere the air force in co-operation with land forces "delivered blows at enemy units massing at various points."

The air force during Sunday and Monday brought down seventy-four German planes, the communique stated, while the Russians themselves were losing fifty-one.

In the reported capture of City "N" the Russians were said to have routed superior enemy forces.

"A dispatch from the front to the official government newspaper, Izvestia said that the Red Army launched its attack on this city without artillery preparation, catching the enemy by surprise and forcing its way into the city despite a German defense which included machinegun and automatic rifle fire from rooftops."

Then the German artillery opened fire, and the Russian infantry went into the defensive during a four-hour battle of the big guns.

Russian quarters maintained an atmosphere of calm confidence and Moscow, supreme objective of the German land attack and already the target of air attacks, remained a grim but orderly capital with no signs of unusual anxiety or confusion.

oil wells and refineries "in case of an extreme emergency."

He said all measures had been taken in preparation for such an emergency and there would be no hesitation in utterly destroying the wells and plants.

With Oumansky in the conference with Welles was Lieut. Gen. Filip Golikov, chief of the Russian military mission now seeking to speed up American war supplies to the Soviet Union.

Despite the French agreement with Japan permitting occupation of military and naval bases in French Indo-China, Welles said that the United States relations with the Vichy government continued on the same basis as in the past year.

Japanese Troops Continue To Pour Into Indo-China

Convoy of 15 Vessels Arrives at Saigon -- New Demands Reported

(Associated Press Service) By FRANK L. MARTIN, JR. SAIGON, FRENCH INDO-CHINA, Wednesday July 30—A convoy of fifteen Japanese naval ships arrived here today with troops as the Japanese sped the occupation of bases in Indo-China.

The arrivals here followed the movement of Nipponese forces into nearby Camranh, French Indo-China naval base 800 miles from Manila.

Thus proceeded in force the occupation of eight air bases and five garrison posts which, it was announced officially today, will put a total of 40,000 Japanese troops in Southern Indo-China, will station Japanese planes within easy bombing range of British Malaya and Burma, within an hour's flight of Bangkok, and will enable Japanese air patrols to cover the ship routes of the China sea and complete Japanese air domination of all Indo-China.

The five-year-old base of Camranh bay itself is practically equidistant from the powerful American base of Cavite, guarding the approach to Manila bay, and from the British bases of Hongkong and Singapore. It is about 600 miles from the coast of the Dutch East Indies.

Saigon was calm, preparing for reception of the Japanese army of occupation.

There were unconfirmed reports of the effect that Japan had served new demands on Thailand, including one that Thailand join Japan's so-called new Asiatic order in return for cession of Laos and Cambodia from Indo-China.

Thailand troops now are pushing their occupation of these parts of Indo-China wrested from the French in their recent war, including the City of Battambang.

ations were virtually at a stand-still, and there were no clear indications as to when they would be able to operate again.

American citizens without a supply of money simply were doing without. The only United States firms whose assets were not blocked were those more than fifty per cent owned by Japanese interests, such as plants of the International General Electric.

Even the embassies were getting short of gasoline.

The total value of American-owned property in Japan affected in one way or another was reliably estimated at a billion yen ($234,000,000).

As to the action of the Dutch East Indies it was asserted here that the colonial government was a tool of the United States and Britain, and it was clear that the situation was becoming more tense.

In an announcement to appear in Wednesday morning's papers here, Domei reported that "additional units" of the army and navy had been dispatched to Indo-China on July 27 in accordance with the Tokyo-Vichy agreement for the "joint defense" of the colony.

Points in Agreement

This was the agreement as issued unofficially by the board of information:

"1. The two governments mutually promise military cooperation for the joint defense of Indo-China.

"2. Measures for such cooperation shall be the object of special arrangements.

"The above stipulations shall be valid only so long as the situation which has motivated their adoption exists."

Marylanders Get Temporary Relief From Torrid Heat

Weather Will Be Slightly Above Normal for Next Four Days

(By The Associated Press) Cooling breezes and scattered showers brought Marylanders welcome relief yesterday (Tuesday) after forty-eight hours of withering heat and the weather man predicted it would be fairly comfortable today (Wednesday).

There was not much hope, however, that the relief would be anything but temporary, for in a long-range forecast the Baltimore weather bureau said temperatures in the Middle Atlantic states would average "slightly above normal during the next four days."

Temperatures yesterday generally were well below Monday's sweltering highs. In Baltimore it was 79 at 1 p. m., compared with 103 degrees Monday.

Cumberland went from 100 to 95, Frederick from 95 to 82 and Annapolis from 92 to 77.5 in the forenoon.

8 Deaths Reported

Four deaths—three drownings and one heart attack—have been attributed to the weather in Maryland since Saturday.

At Frederick, the city restricted the use of water, closed the public swimming pool and considered using additional filtration beds at the Linsgrove pumping station to double the auxiliary capacity.

City officials, asserting water consumption was above the pumping capacity, placed a ban on sprinkling of lawns, shrubbery, flowers, gardens and sidewalks.

On the Eastern Shore, a severe electrical and hail storm struck in the vicinity of Centerville Monday night, damaging crops and disrupting telephone and electric power service in rural sections.

More thunder showers and storms were forecast.

Attacks Opponents

Churchill vigorously attacked Sir John Wardlaw-Milne; Leslie Hore-Beelish, former war secretary, and other critics for what he called "the ill-smelling posy" of production criticism which "happily has no relation to the facts."

He lamented the effect in America of Wardlaw-Milne's statement that British production is only seventy-five per cent of potential, and cried out that this was "meat and drink" to United States isolationists.

Wardlaw-Milne, however, stuck to his guns in a brief speech later.

"As to bombers," he said, "British production alone, without taking into account American, has doubled our power of bomb discharge on Germany at 1,500 miles range. In the next three months, taking in American reinforcements, we shall double it again and in the next six months after that we shall redouble it."

Swimming, Not Walking, Is Termed Best Natural All-Around Exercise

LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D., swimming, as we mentioned recently, is the best natural all-around exercise. Walking is a natural form of exercise, but it does not exercise the arms, trunk, or shoulders very much. I suppose climbing trees could be called a natural form of exercise which exercises the muscles of the trunk and arms, but it requires a little too much agility for most of us. But swimming gets to practically every muscle in the body. Swimming, however, is sometimes followed by some disagreeable and even serious consequences. Dr. H. Marshall Taylor, of Jacksonville, Florida, has pointed out in a valuable series of studies on how poorly adapted man is for an aquatic existence.

Protective Devices
Warm blooded animals which naturally lead a semi-aquatic and under water life have been provided by nature with protective devices. The hippopotamus has, instead of rigid openings into the nose, a pair of flaps which can be closed and opened voluntarily and are closed when the hippo submerges. Diving birds, such as the frigate bird, have membranous flaps that close the nasal openings. The alligator is provided with similar mechanisms, and these can be moved by voluntary muscles to cover or uncover the openings.

Water Enters Nose

Man, of course, has no such mechanism. And as a consequence water enters the nose during diving and under water swimming, depriving the mucous membrane of the inside of the nose of its protective reactions to infection and resulting in many cases a year of sinus disease and infection of the middle ear.

As proof of this the striking remark of Dr. Paul Mahoney, of Little Rock, is—"I have never seen a professional swimmer whose nasal mucosa did not resemble the appearance of a dishwasher's hands." Dr. Taylor advocates the continuous forcing of air bubbles out of the nose after the diver hits the water and during under water swimming.

Diving and Colds

Dr. David Mezz, of Brooklyn, however, who has made equally valuable experimental studies on the subject, does not believe that nasal exhalation or combined exhalation to hold back water is effective in preventing water from entering the nose. He quotes the experiments of Hasty to show that in pools during the time of swimming, the water represents the combined washings of the nasal mucous membrane of every swimmer.

First-first diving, repeated diving and backstroke swimming are the worst offenders in exposing the nose to deluges of water. Chilling of the body surface is also a factor in producing nose and ear infections.

Dr. Mezz has devised a rubberized nose clip to close the nasal openings and recommends it for those who tend to catch cold easily.

Questions and Answers

F. A. S.: "Will you tell what causes the heart to skip a beat every few minutes? There is no pain. Would it be from gas?"

Answer: Skipping pulse is so common in people over forty as to be normal. It does not harm. The skipped beat is really a premature beat and called an extrasystole.

Anonymous: "Is it possible to have a good healthy tooth pulled from one person and set in someone else's mouth?"

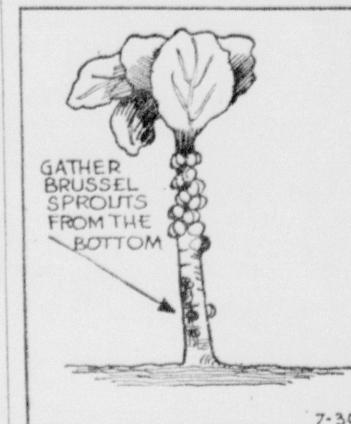

Answer: I'm afraid not. At least I know of no successful example.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS SUGGESTIONS

If you are growing brussels sprouts in your home garden for the first time, do not be dismayed if the first pickings are lacking in flavor. You will find that the first pickings are not as tasty as you may expect; the later ones will have more flavor.

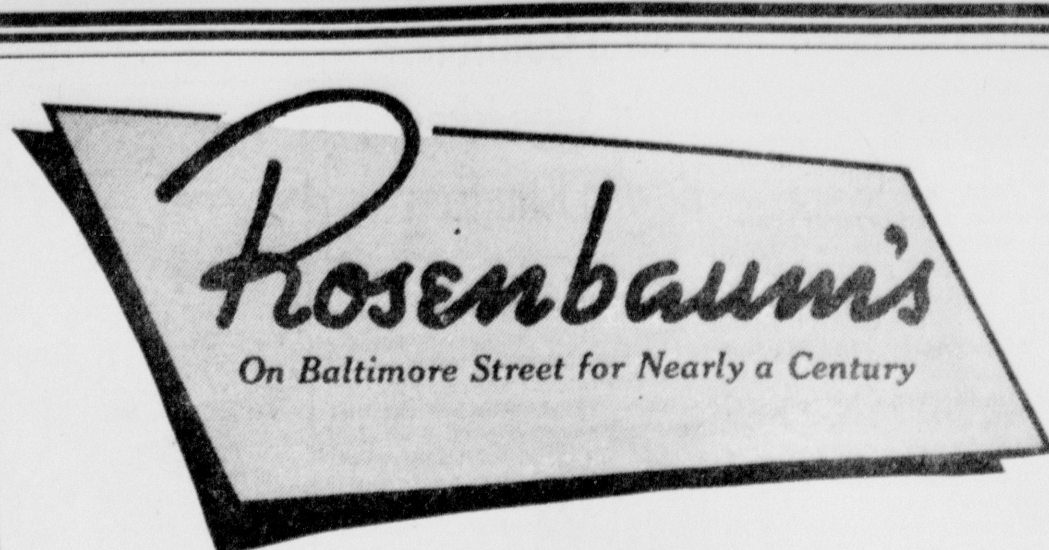

The sprouts or buds of brussels sprouts form first at the lowest leaf bases, then continue forming farther up the stalks. This Garden-Graph shows that the bottom sprouts should be gathered first. The lower leaves can be removed from the plant to facilitate picking the sprouts.

The Promised State Tax Reductions

COMING EVENTS cast their shadows before, and so we can take it from the promise made the other day by Governor O'Connor that the state administration "will be able to reduce real estate and income taxes still further" that a major plank in the next gubernatorial campaign has been adroitly hewn.

And why, pray, should not the realty and income taxes be further reduced? Taxes were made inordinately high at the outset of the present Democratic administration, and the only tenable explanation for so burdening Maryland taxpayers was the opportunity the excessive imposts offered of reducing them in time for future campaign use. Thus we now have the reports from Annapolis that the tax yields this year will be considerably in excess of estimates and goodness knows the estimates were plenty high enough.

This feeding of the kitty and the subsequent raking in of political winnings has not benefited the taxpayers on the whole. It will leave them not much better off than they were at the start. In fact not so well considering the fact that the administration did not do what Governor O'Connor says is the thing that should be done in the face of the tremendous national defense burden. "With defense costs soaring," he said, "it is the obligation of the state and local governments to curtail their expenditures whenever it can be done without impairing essential governmental functions."

As a matter of fact, it was pointed out by the Citizens' State Budget Emergency Committee early this spring before the legislature got through with its job where some $7,000,000 would be saved without reducing state governmental expenses below the standard established during the preceding biennium and suggesting where such savings could best be applied. But, while the work of that committee had a salutary influence and forced reluctant reductions, not nearly as much as should have been made was effected. Not only were non-essential functions continued, but many new positions were unnecessarily added to the pay roll, some 530 having been included in the specified parts of the budget and an undetermined additional number being included in the concealed portions beyond the number already employed. These additional salary listings alone accounted for a boost of more than twenty-two per cent in the budget increase.

Some tax rates were cut by the last legislature, but this was only a teaser as to what can be done for the next campaign, and what will likely be done with a shout of glorification for a state administration that bore down unconditionally and unwarrantably upon the people in order to strengthen its political fences. But certainly the taxpayers of Maryland are not so foolish as to be duped by this trick of robbing Peter to pay Paul.

Draftee Intelligence Makes Good Showing

ARMY TESTS are reported to show the average draftee is smarter than the average civilian, and, according to the adjutant general's office, "this extra complement of intelligence" is enabling the selectees to "learn faster and learn more" than had been expected.

It seems there are four types of examinations given by the army to place the men in the proper jobs: the general classification test which puts the men in their intelligence groupings, tests of aptitude in mechanical and clerical lines, a non-language test for those who cannot read or write English and a minimum literacy test.

The chief value of the examinations is that they save army commanders' time which otherwise would be spent in trying to discover, by trial and error, the capabilities of each draftee. Time is at a premium in the defense training program, so the report that the draftees as a whole are above the national intelligence level is good news. A uniform now may be broadly viewed as a symbol of better-than-average intelligence.

Time To Crack Down With Embargoes

THE UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN should follow up their freezing of Japanese funds and abrogation of trade treaties with embargoes of exports to that Axis creature.

This nation has been exceedingly lenient with respect to the shipment of supplies sorely needed by Japan. The State department, with the support of President Roosevelt, has persistently vetoed suggestions made for many months that the shipments of oil and other materials be cut off. But the shipments in great quantities have gone on despite the fact that they have aided Japan in its war against China, to which this country has been sending supplies and money.

Continuation of the shipments has been held over Japan as a sort of club to keep it from aggressive moves in the Far East. Up to the present that has served as a preventive, but now that it has failed and an aggressive move has been undertaken by Japan, doubtless at the instigation of Hitler, the time seems to have come for cracking down with the embargoes. This country seems to have done all the placating it can afford, if, indeed, it has not already done too much.

If the Japanese should become firmly established with naval bases in Indo-China and at the same time continue to strengthen themselves with vital needs from the United States, it wouldn't be long until they would become encouraged to undertake further aggressions. Or, Hitler's situation might become such as to prompt them. About the first thing would be the feeling that they could not risk being hit by a flanking operation from the Philippines.

Joint economic blockade by the United States and Great Britain should serve to check all that, because Japan is in no condition to withstand so tight a blockade. In spite of all its blustering it is a weak nation. It is weak not only in the raw materials necessary for war but it is also weak in the basic necessities of life; and this weakness has been aggravated by its costly invasion of China. For this reason it dare not go so far as to open hostilities with the United States.

Silk Shortage Nothing To Worry About

WASHINGTON reports that the freezing of Japanese assets in this country will within a short time deprive Americans of silk. Silk comes largely from Japan, in fact about half of its large production being ordinarily absorbed in the United States. It is expected that trade between the two countries will be so hard hit because of the difficulty of making payments that the Japanese silk imports will be virtually stopped.

We can all view that eventually with the utmost equanimity. It may be nice to have lots of silk, but silk is something the people of this country can very easily do without, thanks to American inventive genius and American enterprise. Here in Cumberland, for example, is a large artificial silk manufacturing concern; and there are other like important plants elsewhere in the country.

There is only about two and a half months' supply of silk in the United States at present. But artificial silk manufacturers are rapidly expanding their production. It may be some time before domestic output would catch up in total replacement, but in the meantime the country will be able to get along.

As a matter of fact there is nothing which has been supplied by Japan that this country cannot do without. And as for pure silk, the excellence of its substitutes this country has produced has been gradually shutting out the silk industry anyway.

Time Out for the Goosebone Prophets

ABOUT THIS TIME ANNUALLY various prophets arise and, observing natural phenomena, predict what sort of winter lies ahead. One prophet has it that the winter will be severe because the corn husks are thick. Some think thick fur on animals forecasts a hard winter. A Montana devotee of natural phenomena says the approaching winter will be early and severe because rattlesnakes have shed their skins earlier than usual. The "goosebone prophet" has his own original method of making these predictions.

Probably the fur of animals and other such conditions depend not on the winter that is coming, but on the weather prevailing during the summer. If there has been plenty of moisture and food, animals are in condition for anything. If food has been scarce, their fur is apt to be thin. It would be a boon if weather could be predicted far in advance, but scientists are agreed that it cannot be done without much effort.

After fighting in Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium, France, Greece, Yugoslavia, Libya and now Russia, the average German soldier probably has forgotten what Berlin really looks like.

Mussolini, according to an editorial, should never have got into the European war game. Yep, it's obvious now to any poker player that Il Duce didn't even have openers.

There has been a pronounced reduction in the number of defense workers on strike since Hitler attacked Russia. But of course the strikes were not inspired by the Reds.

A fond parent these days warns his youngsters always to tell the truth or they may grow up to become a European communique writer.

Why shouldn't movie producers treat a book that way if they wish? The purchaser of a cow has the right to butcher it.

Everything Gets Around

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Everything gets around. Sooner or later it does. Everything circulates.

Even matter gets around. . . . A seed falls and germinates. It pushes its way through the dark earth, reaches the sunlight, grows toward the sky. It becomes a great tree and lives for a thousand years, dies and rots and nourishes the rich earth and is food for seeds.

Water gets around. . . . It falls on the hills and flows to the valleys. It rushes to the sea and joins the great currents there. It rises toward the sun, congregates in the clouds, falls again to the thirsty earth.

Ideas get around. . . . The thoughts of men live undiminished and unscathed through the tumultuous centuries. Rejected by the stupid, embraced by the wise, they survive all perils. . . . The thoughts men had in India five thousand years ago fell into books and went across the sea to England and into the brain of a Yankee named Thoreau. He wrote an essay on "Civil Disobedience." Half a century later a little brown man named Gandhi read that essay in South Africa, took that idea back with him to India, and proposed "Civil Disobedience" to his people. . . . That idea got around.

Truth gets around. . . . Lies get around. . . . Gossip gets around. . . . Fear gets around. . . . Everything, today or tomorrow, this year or next, gets around. It creeps, it tunnels, it walks, it runs, it flutters, it flies—and it does get around.

What you are really like—gets around. People find out and they tell, with a wink, with a growl, with a lift of the eye brows, with silence, with the eagerly spoken word. . . . If you are a fine fellow or a hypocrite, a rascal or a square-shooter, the news will get around.

People will know because—as the wind moves and the water flows and ideas flit from man to man—everything gets around!

Power Control Fight Sees Ickes Bow to Knudsen

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

OPM Director William S. Knudsen won an important battle in his fight with Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes when he knocked out the latter's drive for total control of the country's hydro-electric power. It remains to be seen how successful he will be in his struggle to defeat Leon Henderson's effort to add production regulation to his Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply's authority over the amount of cash we have to pay for life's necessities.

Bill Knudsen had some help in his resistance to Secretary Ickes's attempt. Harold had grabbed so much already and has been trying to grab so much more that he'd antagonized a number of departments and agencies besides Bill's OPM, and they backed Bill up in his defense.

Harold's pretty potent just as interior secretary. He has, in fact, a lot to say about power generation, through his department's control of coal and oil production. However, this wasn't enough for him. He wanted to include hydro-electric energy—to develop it and to ration it out.

It was a scheme resented not only by Bill Knudsen, but by the Federal Power Commission and the Tennessee Valley Authority also. He proposed likewise to take charge of national transportation, a notion which set the Federal Commerce Commission by the ears, as well as the railroads, bus and truck companies and steamboat lines.

And he sought domination of telegraph, telephone and the radio, which made the Federal Communications Commission hot under the collar. What's more, in times of emergency, the War and Navy departments consider communications supervision among their prerogatives, so Harold made THEM sore.

For quite a while he's been trying to take the Forestry Bureau away from the Agriculture department, which consequently is angry with him.

Circumventing Ickes

Well, what Bill Knudsen did was to create a power unit, under J. A. Krug, of the Office of Production Management, to stir up more and more hydro-electric energy and dish it out, split up between defense and civilian industries, as it thinks best—precisely the job that Harold had desired to become czar of. And Bill's making his system stick, perhaps not so much because he's so popular as because Harold's so much the other way.

There's gossip in Washington to the effect that Harold's aim has been to make such a mogul out of himself that he'll have to be presidentially nominated next time. If so, Bill's thrown a wrench into his campaign.

Not even Bill disputes that Leon Henderson's the country's official price fixer. True, the question's quite generally asked whether or not he can make his price fixations stick. He has had to rely largely upon exhortations and appeals, which have worked fairly well but not 100 per cent, and it's surmised that his success percentage will shrink as the pinch gets worse.

Wants More Authority

What Leon would like is more legal authority, so that he can hold inflation down by force. That's a detail, though, that doesn't concern Bill.

It's when Leon announces that production of autos, for civilian use, must be cut down fifty per cent, practically instantly, that Bill objects. Leon's idea is that auto curtailment will permit auto factories to switch over to larger outputs of defensive stuff. Bill says that's all right, but the transformation can't

THE SEVEN LEAGUE BOOTS OF DEFENSE

Runaway Government Invites Serious Consequences, Gen. Hugh Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON
NEW YORK, July 29 — Unless we soon get some kind of efficient overhead command, control and co-ordination of this mammoth economic war in which we are already engaged to the hilt, there is going to be hell to pay in this country. From every point of the compass are signs of volcanic eruptions in the ways of life and labor by which breadwinners feed their families.

For example, no official with a single responsibility like price control should be permitted to order so drastic a step as fifty per cent reduction in automobile production without consultation with other chiefs of our economic effort. It amounts to arbitrary paralysis of a system upon which millions depend for their living—employers, employees and their dependents.

Small, to the great national effort.

Here's Another

Another scheme's suggested in Washington.

It is that the government should buy all of every kind of raw material that's required for both defense and civilian processing, and then ration it out to manufacturers in proportion to what it's obvious that conditions demand. It can't possibly be done intelligently, this proposition, proponents argue, except under strict central, governmental control.

Women's Rights Threatened

From the Cincinnati Enquirer

The House Ways and Means committee has reaffirmed its recommendation that husband's and wives must file joint income tax returns. Although there was strenuous opposition to this action, the majority of the committee evidently are so absorbed in the problem of finding greater revenue that they have lost sight of the great social dangers involved.

It is commonly supposed that the proposal to forbid separate returns is something new, stemming from the present emergency. This is not the fact. Eight times before in recent years the attempt has been made to require joint returns from married couples. Every time it has been defeated in Congress. It is true that the emergency today is greater, but it has not been shown that there is no other way of producing adequate revenue. It has not been shown because it cannot be shown.

Two Essentials

You can't control rising prices without controlling rising wages and prices of food. This administration seems to lack the stomach for that for fear of labor and agriculture. And yet price control is as necessary to protect people in those two fields as it is to protect other people. What agency is studying this vital complex as a whole and reporting frankly and honestly to the American people on this problem?

The new tax bill is another evidence of lack of governmental guts. It is positively vicious in its adherence to the old Huey Long formula of "sock the rich." That is all right. I have yet to hear a complaint from people in the higher brackets except as to the cynically unjust compulsory joint return which vastly increases taxes on some heads of families if their wives happen to have an income too. But the cowardice of the tax bill is that it doesn't broaden the base of taxation and make everybody pay some part of his income, be it ever so small, to the great national effort.

Eventually—Why Not Now?

There is apparently no fear of soaking the not-so-rich by excise and other hidden taxes that are much heavier but for which no politician fears to be blamed.

But a courageous administration seeking unity through justice and with an efficient economic general staff working to balance all these burdens would lose no time in frankly and courageously exposing all such things as are discussed in this column and at least trying to get our American economic motor clicking on all twelve cylinders.

It will have to be done eventually, but why do we have to suffer all the inconveniences, useless sacrifice and possibly danger of disaster by not doing it in time—By not reorganizing the executive side of government for efficient co-ordinated action right now

Maryland Farm Musings

By the Extension Service of the University of Maryland

Actual figures covering apple trees removed in Maryland under the Soil Conservation program are not complete, but an approximate estimate shows that about eighty-six growers are participating in ten counties, according to A. F. Vierheller, specialist in horticulture for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

Mr. Vierheller says that about 13,775 trees have been removed and that with some changes yet to be announced this number should be exceeded next year. He adds that many thousands of trees were removed by growers who did not participate in the program.

The annual 4-H Club Week will be held at the University of Maryland from August 4 to 9 this year. About 600 club members from all sections of Maryland are expected to attend the event.

When seeds are sampled from a bin it is important to take samples from all points in the bin so as to get an over-all average. It is pointed out by Forrest Holmes, head of the seed inspection laboratory at College Park. He states that seed taken off the top of a bin may show much higher germination than seed from the bottom and in the center. The former have had a better opportunity to dry out and keep cool.

The fifteenth annual conference of the Middle Atlantic Grange Lecturers' Association will be held at the University of Maryland from August 12 to 15.

Big Enough Now For Regulation

From the Johnstown, Pa. Tribune

The magazine Steel, in its current issue, says that "trade unionism has become Big Business, with an annual 'take' estimated at $250,000,000 to $500,000,000. Apparently it is destined to become an even larger and more profitable business, under protection of a labor government during these years of sharply-increased employment and high wages."

Trade unionism has, indeed, made tremendous strides during recent years. Its rapid growth may account in some measure for the excesses which have marked its rise. There have been abuses of power which the Roosevelt administration made no effort to curb until it threatened the success of the national defense program.

It is true that trade unionism has become Big Business, and as such it should be subject to the same degree of government regulation applied to other business and industrial concerns. The unions are collecting huge sums in initiation fees and dues from their members, but their officers are not required to make any accounting of income to the government. Indeed, in many instances, they have been making no accounting of their stewardship to their own members.

That is a condition that must be corrected before the leaders of organized labor can win the full confidence of the public.

Many Hands Take Part in Framing Price Control

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 29 — The fixing of the price control legislation was an all-hands job. Drafting was the work of a brilliant young lawyer in Opax, David Ginsberg, and the legal deputy administrator, John Hamm.

But the list of co-authors include Vice President Wallace, Speaker Rayburn, Leaders McCormack and Barkley with Bernard Buchback in the shadows.

So touchy were the congressional leaders on the hated subject, Mr. Rayburn refused to tell ahead of time who would sponsor the bill in the House or to which committee it would be referred.

Rayburn frankly said he did not want to subject the chosen gentleman to such tremendous pressure one moment earlier than necessary.

Economic Taxes Sought

Mr. Wallace, who has become a vice president in fact as well as title, and the other White House economic planners are covering their disappointment with the tax bill by expectations of getting what they want later.

What they want is some taxation for economic purposes rather than revenue. They want to employ the taxing power as a weapon to beat off inflation. Specifically they have been talking of increasing the social security taxes (old age and unemployment), of much higher consumer taxes (even the discarded general sales tax has been mentioned), of higher excess profits taxes.

In general, the talk assumes the country will be ready for some such steps next year, but many in the group believe national income is rising so rapidly as to require congressional action this fall.

Fourth Term Recognized

The fourth term has received its first official, though very much off the record, recognition. The possibility was brought up last week at one of the clandestine meetings of the young New Dealers in the government (some call them the "hot dog" boys, in recognition of the old official paternal proclivity of Justice Frankfurter.)

The subject was touched but lightly. Someone mentioned it as something to start thinking about, as the state of the world in '44 would be worse than that which required the re-election of FDR last year. The idea was advanced that technical opposition would probably be weaker now than that the tradition was broken. That was all.

Mr. Roosevelt, probably will not hear of it until he reads it here. They do not tell him these things.

British Ready in Burma

The British have massed substantial forces of native colonial troops (exceptionally well trained) in Burma just in case the Japanese suddenly decide to move down into Siam. The Burmese are ready to fall on the flank of any further southward movement of the Japs. For that reason, no one here expects the Japs to go into Siam just yet.

A Major Mistake

Why the British failed to destroy the rich Rumanian oilfields when they knew the Nazis were coming in, continues to be as much debated as Lindbergh and Wheeler, and as part of the same general subject. It is true the British owed most of the Rumanian wells which are now the chief source of Hitler's supply, but Rumanians operated them. Some British engineers were around, but not enough to do a real sabotage job of sealing them with concrete, in the presence of Rumanian and Nazi secret police.

A few wells could have been dynamited, but the results would not have been important. Bombs of sufficient range were apparently not available for an air attack. This is one of the major British mistakes of the war, nothing more.

Too Big To Know

Government is becoming such a colossal hurriedly organized structure, no one knows much of what it is doing. Navy Surgeon General Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntyre went up to the House Appropriations committee, formally requesting funds to construct a research building for studies in tropical and aviation diseases. The committee members heard him, then informed his $370,000 had been appropriated some time back for precisely such an organization under Charles Tal-years. Its rapid growth may account in some measure for the excesses which have marked its rise. There have been abuses of power which the Roosevelt administration made no effort to curb until it threatened the success of the national defense program.

The unions are collecting huge sums in initiation fees and dues from their members, but their officers are not required to make any accounting of income to the government. THE DAILY STORY

BRIGHT AND GAY

The Rain Was Telling Her Sad Story Back to Her, but It Couldn't See the Young Man in the Next Booth

By PATRICIA LEEDS

The rain beat against the window and then rolled down the length of the pane like huge tears. The smell of raincoats and umbrellas pervaded the air and everything felt chill and clammy in the corner drugstore. The world looked desolate in general, but mostly so to Danya as she peered out onto the street in the place, besides the emshimmering rain-soaked boulevard. No, there was nobody waiting out there. Once more she glanced up at the large clock that ticked off the minutes with exasperating regularity. She sighed and walked back to one of the empty tables, which were now quite plentiful. As a matter of fact, the only other person in the place, besides the employee, was a young man, who had been waiting for somebody almost as long as she had. However, he seemed to take his waiting problem philosophically, reading the paper and smoking, with an occasional glance at his watch. Danya had ya's vibrant gypsy-like face had exuded a sort of rapture. Johnny, her dancing teacher, had phoned to tell her he had secured an interview with Stanislas Rodin for her. Rodin had one of the finest ballet groups in the country. For years Danya had dreamed of being a ballerina in his group, but he was so unapproachable and his standards were so severe. She had never really what were you supposed to tell her," Danya asked with acute tenderness. "On, just to come to rehearsals tomorrow afternoon. Why?" "I'm the girl with the red hat," she answered laughing and suddenly everything was bright and gay again. (Distributed by United Feature Syndicate) glanced over most of the magazines on display, but did not attempt to concentrate on any since it only reminded her of what she was doing there.

Yesterday about this time Dan-gone to dancing-school—that was too expensive—but her mother taught her and then her young Uncle Johnny took over the task. They had both been trained in Moscow.

Johnny had been with the ballet until that accident. Ever since the train wreck he had developed some phobia and refused to go on the road. Instead he organized a small group in the city and by teaching and occasionally performing he managed to get along.

But it was with Danya that he spent most of his time. Both attired in their round-necked, long-sleeved, black jersey dancing outfits, they would spend hours just dancing.

"When you're ready for the ballet I'll introduce you to Rodin," he would say. And now after many years he thought she was ready.

It was only yesterday that he had called, saying, "I spoke to Rodin. I won't be able to introduce you, but he says he'll have a few minutes after rehearsals and he'll meet you in the corner drugstore of the theater building at 5. I told him what you look like and said you'd be wearing that pretty red hat."

"But, Johnny," she had answered with dismay, "that hat isn't mine. It's Tina's."

"So what. Tell her to let you wear it again and, anyhow, you know what he looks like." How well she knew. She read every article written about him and saved all his pictures. She would recognize that thick shock of gray hair, the dark penetrating eyes and frowning, bushy eyebrows anywhere. Suddenly she realized what an interview with him meant and thanked Johnny so profusely that he finally hung up on her, first admonishing her to practice her prouettes and leaps in case he should ask her to dance for him the afternoon following the interview.

Today it would rain and Tina refused to let Danya wear her best hat. However, Danya had been certain of him recognizing her or vice versa. She suddenly interrupted her reverie to glance up at the clock again. It was almost 6:30. Even if Rodin had meant 6 instead of 5 he was still late. It looked like he wasn't going to appear, she mused with the utter dejection that follows elation. She sat there uncomprehending and disconsolate.

"Since we're both stood up, how about some coffee?" She glanced up—it was the philosophical young man and at the sight of his appealing grin her glum countenance changed.

The coffee and sandwiches came and as they ate, she wondered why any girl would want to ditch such a nice young man. As though reading her thoughts, he said, "Your boy friend's got a lot of nerve standing up a pretty girl like you."

She laughed and as he gave her a quizzical look she explained, "I was thinking the same thing about your girl friend."

"Say, what girl friend? I'm too busy to bother about women, at least I was up until now," he replied with sincerity in his voice.

"Then what were you doing here?"

"Well, you see, I'm a publicity agent for a busy temperamental guy, who was supposed to meet some dancer here in a red hat."

With a loud clatter she dropped her cup back in the saucer. "Wh-

Jealousy Makes Children Suffer, Parents Advised

One Youngster Shouldn't Be Compared Unfavorably With Another

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.
Most parents seldom realize how much suffering a child may have to endure because of jealousy.

Concerning a girl 9 with a brother 6, a mother writes:
"She has always been a child who has cried easily. Even when a little thing, if she was disciplined in any way, she would cry and go to the room and sob and moan until she would be deathly white and limp."

"During these periods, after her brother was born, I was in a very nervous condition and in bad health for some months. I know that I scolded her harshly at times."
"Then again her father was always so proud of his son that while he showed no partiality in giving to them he undoubtedly put her in the background and showed off the boy."

Bright and Healthy
"Every night when I tucked her in bed and kiss her she will say, 'Mother, do you love me? I love you.' This seems to be about her only worry—that I won't love her."
"She, according to the doctor, is in the best of health. . . . She gets excellent marks in school. Her teachers say they never have a bit of trouble with her."

"But at home she changes completely. She nags and complains from morning till night."
"How would you and I act and feel in that child's face? I must confess that I suffered with this child as I read the letter, though I tried to remember that the mother and father have also suffered over this problem."

Terrible Jealousy
As kindly as I could, I wrote the mother trying to get her to see that her daughter's conduct comes from terrible jealousy; that this child supposes she is not loved at all while her brother is. Apparently the child never has had much affection, very little approval from her parents, and much scolding, slapping and switching. The more punishment she got the more sure she was of no love. Then while she was whipped into doing things her brother cooperated and was applauded for it.

I urged the mother and father to stop using corporal punishment, to cut down on any sort of punishment and show her abundant, real affection, and play up her successes and good traits, being careful never to compare her unfavorably with her brother.

Solving Parent Problems
Q. Give an economical way of preparing orange juice.
A. You will not, of course, let orange juice stand since it loses some of the vitamin C when exposed to the air. Louise Zabriske (Mother and Baby Care in Pictures) writes:

"An economical and safe method of preparing the orange juice is to cut a small piece from one end of an orange and squeeze the juice from that piece for one feeding; then turn the orange so that the cut surface is against the plate, saucer or patapaper. It should be kept in the ice box or some cool place until the next feeding time. Then cut off another piece of the orange and squeeze out a fresh spoonful or the amount needed. By repeating this method one orange may be used for three or four feedings."

And about tomato juice, she says: "Tomato juice, even though it is canned, may be used as a substitute or an alternate for orange juice. Strain the portion to be used for the baby when the can is opened and keep it closely covered in the ice box or other cool place. Twice as much tomato juice as orange juice should be given to the baby to provide the necessary amount of vitamin C. The vitamin C content of these juices is given to the baby to prevent scurvy."

Tucker County Aluminum Drive Gels under Way

Thomas Has Collected 600 Pounds of Metal Needed for Defense

PARSONS, W. Va., July 29.—The aluminum drive for Tucker county is well under way. Mayor G. E. Mosser of Thomas has announced that about 600 pounds of aluminum has been deposited in front of the city hall in Thomas with many of the towns yet to complete collection.

Mayor Robert Rease of Davis announced that 100 pounds of aluminum has been gathered from the city of Davis and more is expected to be turned in today.

The intensive drive for Parsons and the surrounding towns in the lower end of Tucker county is to be started today. Already the large bin built in front of the Court House in Parsons has begun to be filled. The drive in Parsons is expected to take the rest of the week and the boy scouts and the girl scouts will assist in collecting the pots and pans.

Wedding Is Held

Miss Margaret O'Hara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. O'Hara of Scranton, Pa., and Stephen Budash, son of Mr. Michael Budash and the late Mrs. Mary Spiller Budash, were married Friday morning at the St. Thomas Catholic church in Thomas. The uncle of the bridegroom, the Rev. Father Francis Spiller performed the ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass in the presence of the immediate families.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served in the rectory, after which the bridal couple left for a honeymoon in the Eastern States and Canada.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Parsons of Parsons announce the birth of a daughter in the Tucker county hospital on July 27.

James Gillis of Parsons has been appointed visitor for the Tucker county department of Public assistance.

Witnesses

He testified that Miller and Earl Loveless left the Loveless home around 8:45 and returned about three quarters of an hour later.

The witness declared he was in the kitchen when Miller and Earl returned and that both of them had blood on the front of their clothes. He said Helen, his sister who has since been married to Miller, asked them, "What have you done?" and that Earl replied, "we just knocked out the old man." Helen asked them, he said, "Why did you do that?" and Earl answered, "to get money."

According to Ellsworth the two men then went upstairs and changed their clothes, came down stairs and went out into the yard and he saw Earl and James at Earl's car. The witness told the jury that he went out in the yard and that Earl wanted to give him money saying they had about $300. He said he did not take any of the money, however, and that he did not see it.

Ellsworth testified that Earl told him that he and Miller drove to the Poffenberger farm in Earl's car, parking it in the lane and that Miller went into the wash house and hid behind the door, while Earl went to the house, got Poffenberger out of bed and told him his car had run out of gas and he wanted him to get some gas.

Says Miller Used Wrench

Poffenberger went to the wash house and started to pour some gasoline from a five gallon can into a one gallon can and as he stooped over Miller hit him with a wrench twice. Ellsworth said later in the night he went to the Poffenberger farm with Earl and Jack Ask and that Earl told him to go to the barn and get the wrench from the feeding room where he hid it. The witness related that he used a handkerchief to handle the wrench as he did not want to leave his fingerprints on it. He placed the wrench on a pile of weeds along a path in the chicken yard where officers have testified they found it about daylight on Oct. 12, the second time they searched the chicken yard.

On cross examination by Attorney Omar Keyser Ellsworth admitted he had been in jail five weeks and that he and other members of his family agreed to testify following a conference Monday night with E. Austin James, attorney for the Loveless family, Wagaman and Harris.

Story Is Substantiated

He denied that any promise had been made him and that James had told him to "tell the truth" but later admitted that James told the Loveless family if they would testify and tell the truth that charges against all but Earl would be dropped and that they would be released from jail and that it might save Earl from being hanged.

On re-direct examination the witness said that neither Wagaman nor Harris made any promises to him. In answer to a question asked by Keyser if he was not testifying to help Earl, Ellsworth answered, "I can't help him now but I am hoping he don't get hung. I am telling this because it is the truth."

Calvin Loveless, 16, gave much the same testimony as Ellsworth but did not go into as much detail, and that he did not see Earl and James leave their home the night of the slaying.

William J. Lovless, 63-year-old father of the Loveless boys substantiated to considerable degree the testimony of Ellsworth and Calvin, but said he did not see Earl and Miller return to his home but that he heard them in the kitchen talking and that he was in the front room reading a newspaper. He said he did not testify last week when his son Earl was on trial and that no promises had been made him by either Wagaman or Harris, but that Attorney James told him if he "told the truth" all except Earl would be released and that it might "save the boys from the rope."

On cross examination Lovless said that a statement he made to State's Attorney Wagaman in Hagerstown in June was true and that he was told if he would sign the statement that he would be released from jail and allowed to go home, and that he went home the night he signed the statement.

Physicians Are Recalled

Lovless was questioned a short time after court convened at 1:52 p. m. after which the state recalled Dr. Samuel Robert Wells, deputy medical examiner of Washington county. He was asked how long he believed Poffenberger lived at least an hour and possibly three to three and a half hours. Replying to a question by a defense attorney he said he was certain Poffenberger did not die within fifteen minutes after he was struck.

Dr. Kurt Lande, Washington county pathologist, who testified Monday, was also recalled and he declared in his opinion Poffenberger lived an hour after he was injured and gave several reasons for his belief.

Leister Isenogle, Washington county deputy sheriff, was the next witness and told of going to the Poffenberger farm about 11:45 the night of the slaying and of searching in the chicken yard for a "blunt instrument" with a three cell flash light, but said he found nothing.

FBI Men Testify

The state then called Edwin S. Deiss, special fingerprint expert of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, in Washington, D. C. He identified fingerprints on a card which he said was turned over to him by Wayne A. Slesman, Washington county investigator, as those of Poffenberger. The FBI agent also identified the one gallon can which he said he examined Oct. 12 and told the jury he found three of Poffenberger's fingerprints on it. Asked by State's Attorney Wagaman how many finger prints he had compared Deiss replied "at least three million." There was no cross examination.

T. D. Beach, special agent for the FBI identified a wrench which he said Sellman brought him and that upon making an examination he found human blood on it.

On cross examination by Defense Attorney Wilson, Beach said Sellman also brought some articles of clothing but that he made no examination of them. Replying to a question the witness said human blood on clothing could be identified as long as seven years after the article had been stained by the blood. Answering a question asked by State's Attorney Harris, Beach said blood could be washed out of clothing but replying to another question by Wilson said it would take considerable washing to remove blood stains.

Objection Overruled

Lloyd D. Diffenderfer, on direct examination by Wagaman said he had been convicted twice and was now serving a term in the Maryland House of Correction for unauthorized use of an automobile. The witness told of being in the Washington county jail with Miller, Earl Loveless and Joseph Slesser and that Earl Loveless told them that he and Miller killed and robbed Poffenberger. He said that Loveless told them Miller hit the aged man twice with a wrench and that he "finished him off" with a machine hammer, and that he took $300 out of Poffenberger's pocket.

The defense moved that all of Diffenderfer's testimony be stricken out on the ground that it was hearsay evidence and secondary at the best. The court overruled the objection and the defense noted an exception.

On cross examination Diffenderfer testified he did not tell anyone about Loveless admitting the crime until after he learned that Loveless had made a confession.

Joseph Slesser, who testified he had also been convicted twice, both times for forgery and was now serving a term in the Maryland House of Correction, told much the same story as Diffenderfer but in more detail and was certain that Miller and Loveless both told about committing the crime.

Railroad Officer Testifies

After a short recess court reconvened at 3:15 and Robert J. Clinch, Washington county deputy sheriff and turnkey at the jail in Hagerstown, told the jury that Loveless, Miller, Diffenderfer and Slesser occupied the same cell in the jail. On cross examination he said neither Diffenderfer or Slesser ever told him that Miller and Loveless had admitted the murder.

The final witness yesterday was Lieut. E. J. Chapman, of the Western Maryland police who said he had served 20 years as an officer with the railroad and three with the Maryland State Police. Answering a question by Wagaman, Chapman said it was a practice in Washington county for him to assist Washington county police in investigation of crimes when asked to do so and that Wagaman and Sheriff Baker of Washington county asked him to assist on the Poffenberger case.

The officer told of visiting the Poffenberger home and of talking with Earl Loveless several times, but that he did not know James Miller until he was arrested and placed in Washington county jail on another charge in March. Chapman told of installing a sound detector in a cell occupied by Miller and Loveless and of listening to conversations between the two men. He said he kept a record of what they said taking it down in longhand. Over the objection of defense counsel Chapman read a series of questions and answers which he said he took down while listening over the sound detector.

The substance of the conversation was that Miller after being convicted in Washington county for assault and robbery told Earl Loveless that he would be going to the penitentiary soon and that he (Loveless) had better not say anything about the Poffenberger case while he was gone. Chapman said Loveless replied, "I ain't saying nothing, they can kill me and I won't tell."

Not Seeking Reward

Asked by Wagaman if he kicked Miller on the shins any time he was questioning him Chapman replied that once when he was questioning the defendant that he kept cursing him and that after warning him several times that he kicked Miller on the shin and told him not to curse him.

On cross examination Chapman denied that he was promised any pay for working on the case and said that he had not been paid any money and was not to receive any. He said he was not seeking any of the $600 reward offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Poffenberger. He said he told the officers when he started to work on the case that he would not accept any money for assisting in the investigation.

When court reconvened at 9:55 yesterday morning Wayne A. Sellman, Washington county investigator, resumed his direct testimony, and said that Miller told Washington county officers he wrote the note which was found in his pocket-book by Sellman on Oct. 12. It bore the dates Oct. 11, Oct. 12, 1940.

Sellman told the jury that at first Miller refused to say why he wrote the note but after about fifteen or twenty minutes he said he wrote the note because on those days he had seen David Howe in the vicinity of the Poffenberger farm and that he wanted to remember it to tell Mrs. Florida Remsburg. However, according to Sellman, Miller told him he never did tell Mrs. Remsburg.

He also related the conditions of the Poffenberger residence as he found them when he entered the house and said doors were open, a mattress was on the floor, mops were on a landing leading to the stairs, that dresser drawers were partially open and that there was some disarrangement of the contents.

Never Saw Miller

On cross examination by Kaylor, Sellman testified that he never saw Miller at the Poffenberger farm on the night of the murder nor the next day.

The defense tried to get Sellman to say whether Lieut. Chapman kicked Miller when he was being questioned in Hagerstown, but the investigator said he did not see Chapman kick him. He added, however, that Miller contended Chapman kicked him. Sellman said Miller was being questioned about an assault and robbery case and not about the Poffenberger murder.

Answering a question asked by Wilson, Sellman told the jury that the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington, D. C. did not find Miller's fingerprints, on either the wrench, the one gallon can, or the funnel which he took to Washington for the FBI to investigate.

The state recalled Dr. Ira M. Zimmerman, of Williamsport, and asked him how long in his opinion Poffenberger lived after being struck. Defense counsel objected on the ground that the witness answered the same question Monday and the court upheld the objection. Dr. Zimmerman was then excused.

Court adjourned at 4:10 and will reconvene this morning at 9:15 o'clock. The state has several more witnesses to place on the stand and it was indicated that it would take most of the day to complete the examination of state witnesses.

Three Deeds Are Filed

At Recorder's Office

In Court House Here

The hot weather even affected recording of deeds and other documents yesterday at the court house with not much business being transacted.

Among papers filed were eighteen conditional sales contracts, one chattel mortgage, two purchase money mortgages and three deeds. The Allegany County Board of Education decided a property near Westernport to Bertha M. Uhl. It is known as the "Duckworth School."

The Liberty Trust Company, trustee, transferred a property on Oldtown road to Irvin Powell Bowers and Robert George Bowers. Lorenza C. Lambert deeded Lot 4 in the L. C. Lambert addition, McCoolie, to William Lester Lambert.

Well, now, for the racing tips, Manley doesn't know any more about what horses are coming in as winners than you do but he vouchsafed a hint, "By the law of average" he said, "one cannot be a consistent winner or loser."

At the close of Manley's talk, Romanians who had not visited the Colleen Moore's marvellous doll house, were taken on an inspection of it as guests of Morris Rosenbaum.

working to impose discriminatory measures on the cooperatives. The speaker declared that the farmer has no forty-hour week, no Wagner Act or no Social Security to protect him in his old age, but urged him not to let down Uncle Sam regardless of the difficulties confronting him. "The farmer must provide food for national defense as it is just as important as gunpowder," Brumback declared.

In conclusion Brumback urged farmers to stand up for their rights or monopolistic interests will obtain their objectives.

Local Store Prospers

Walter Craig, manager of the Southern States Cooperative store, 300 South George street, told the audience that the local store had done $11,000 worth of business in the last year, and added that the success of the plan is due to the co-operation of the farmers in this area. He cited the rising cost in various material used by the farmer and urged that buying be done immediately as prices will go still higher.

Mayor Harry Irvine and John D. Liebau, manager of the Queen City Dairy, were in the audience and stood when introduced by Craig.

A movie entitled, "Dad Brown's Job," which dealt with life on the farm, was shown. Vocal selections were provided by the Keyser, W. Va. quartet and string music by the Moreland boys of Old Furnace, W. Va.

Robert C. Wilson led a discussion on the subject, "What Farmers Can Do To Improve the Usefulness of Their Cooperative to Agriculture," and J. H. House, of Mt. Savage, had charge of an "Information Please" program.

lutionary relations with the minister.) Further diplomatic steps also will be taken, it now seems certain, in connection with the seizure by an Argentine congressional investigating committee of German diplomatic pouches, and on the occasion of promised "revelations" of an alleged United States plan to make Latin America a colonial dependency.

The committee last Saturday seized a 500-pound German-owned radio transmitter and other material called "elements of propaganda." The committee announced last night, after a strong German protest to the Argentine foreign ministry, that it would return the confiscated matter.

The commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland, reflecting foreign office opinion, declared "it may be assumed that Wilhelmstrasse has suggested to the South American governments that they pay close attention to the explanation in the Belmonte case and remember it if similar situations should arise for themselves."

This suggested that Germany soon may approach Buenos Aires officially with representations that the Dies Committee of the United States Congress (the committee investigating un-American activities headed by the Texas Democrat, Rep. Martin Dies) really runs the Argentine parliamentary committee.

Radio Transmitter Returned to Nazis

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, July 29 (AP)—The congressional committee investigating anti-Argentine activities has announced that it would turn over to the German embassy a portable radio transmitter used in an airplane traveling from Peru to Argentina.

The committee acceded to reiterated demands of the German government for return of the property. The German protest was supported by the Argentine foreign office on grounds that the 500 pound transmitter was traveling under diplomatic immunity.

The committee had contended that it was not "diplomatic baggage" as the Germans insisted but was an air express parcel not entitled to immunity.

Milk production increased about seven per cent and egg production will show a slight increase during the year, Nuttle said.

Witnesses Assert Miller Wielded Wrench in Slaying

Father and Two Brothers of Earl Loveless Testify for the State

Officer Tells of Hearing Crime Discussed While Using Sound Detector

The state put thirteen witnesses on the stand yesterday in Allegany County Circuit Court in an effort to prove that James Lee Miller, 29-year-old Washington county farm hand is guilty of slaying Raleigh Poffenberger, 76-year-old Keedysville, Md., farmer and former Washington county commissioner, who died Oct. 11, 1940 of head injuries which three physicians have testified were inflicted with a blunt instrument.

As the second day of the trial ended the state had presented two witnesses, both brother-in-laws of the defendant, who testified that Miller and Earl Loveless, (also his brother-in-law and who was convicted of first degree murder for the same slaying last week) left the Loveless home (three miles from the Poffenberger farm) early the night of Oct. 11 and returned a short time later with blood on the front of their clothing.

Sound Detector Used
Two other witnesses, both now serving terms in the Maryland House of correction, related to the jury what they said, was the story Miller and Loveless told them while all four were confined in the Washington county jail in Hagerstown, in which they admitted committing the murder.

Another witness described in detail how he placed a sound detector in a cell in the Washington county jail and listened to Miller and Loveless talk about the Poffenberger case. He read a series of questions and answers, after the court overruled an objection by defense counsel, which he said he took down while listening to a conversation between the two men.

The jury also heard on cross examination from three witnesses, (members of the Loveless family) that they agreed to testify yesterday after attending a conference Monday night with E. Austin James, of Frederick, (attorney for the Loveless family and who defended Earl Loveless last week), State Attorney Morgan C. Harris of Allegany county and State Attorney Charles P. Wagman of Washington county.

Told To Tell "The Truth"
They each testified that James advised them to take the stand and "tell the truth" and that if they would do so members of the Loveless family who were indicted as accessory after the fact and who are now in custody will be released and charges against them dropped. They also said James told them it might help to save Earl from being hanged. On re-direct examination they testified that the promises were made by James and that they were not promised anything by Wagman or Harris.

Other highlights of testimony yesterday included statements by two FBI men, one told of finding three of Poffenberger's fingerprints on the one gallon can which numerous witnesses have testified was found in the wash house where Poffenberger's body was found and the other told of finding human blood on the wrench which the state contends was used to kill the aged man.

Saw Blood On Clothes
The first member of the Loveless family to take the stand was Elizabeth, 36, who described in detail happenings at the Loveless home the night the crime was committed. (Continued on Page 8, Col. 1.)

Liebau Is Again Chosen Commerce Chamber Leader

Committee Will Urge City To Arrange for a Traffic Survey

In reorganizing for the coming year by electing officers, the new board of directors of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce yesterday asked its Traffic committee to renew its suggestion that the city government arrange for a traffic survey.

John D. Liebau was elected to the presidency for his third term. Miles G. Thompson was elected first vice-president, Douglas R. Bowie second vice-president, George Buchanan third vice-president and Franklin H. Ankeny treasurer.

The new executive committee comprises Benjamin M. Kamens, Thomas E. Gilchrist, Harry A. Pitzer, Henry W. Price, Arthur J. Weber. The president of the chamber is ex officio a member of this committee.

Action on a traffic survey was prompted by what was described as an increasingly serious congestion in the business district and the appearance of the decentralizing movement that is giving busy cities much concern all over the country.

The Traffic committee held a session following the meeting of the board of directors and decided to renew its plea to the mayor and the city council that a traffic survey be prepared within the next two months or so in order that possible plans may be worked on looking to a solution of the problem. Charles A. Piper is chairman of this committee.

Richard M. Reiser, mayor of New Kensington, Pa., the aluminum manufacturing city, will attend the races as guest of the local association Thursday, August 7.

Manley said that the largest number of trophies in the history of race meetings here will be offered during the ten-day session. Thirty-five trophies were assured up to yesterday and more are expected to be added.

Their bid of $17,206.66 was the lowest of four contractors. Other bids were James C. Powell, $8,000; John S. Cook, $8,997.26; and Wright Richardson Company, $8,120.

Industrial Arts Teachers Scarce, Kopp Declares

Draft, Resignation and Promotion Leave Five Vacancies in County

Faced with the task of finding replacements for five industrial arts teachers, three of whom have resigned to accept other positions, one answered the call to military service and another promoted to supervisor, Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of Allegany county public schools, yesterday admitted that he has quite a job on his hands.

Kopp said that the problem of filling the jobs at this time is more difficult than in past years due to the fact that the Selective Service Act has taken the majority of eligibles into the army.

Those who have resigned to accept other positions are Paul E. Horn, of Allegany high school, who is now with the Glenn Martin airplane plant in Baltimore; Norman Greene, of Bruce high school, Westport, and Owen L. Fahling, of Beall high school, Frostburg.

Ralph Pasley, of Allegany, has been drafted for military service. One of the two openings at Port Hill high school came about with the advancement of Julius D. Lonnholm to a supervisory capacity in the place formerly held by Herschel James, who now is supervisor of defense training in the State of Maryland, with headquarters in Baltimore.

Kopp stated that B. A. Beguhn, who has been in charge of part-time printing at Port Hill and Allegany, will replace Horn at Allegany, thus leaving an opening in the printing position.

The county superintendent must find new men for one position each at Allegany, Bruce, Beall and Port Hill and one instructor to work the part-time job at Allegany and Port Hill.

Plans are furnished by George F. Sansbury and Caleb White is the contractor.

Food Market Partners Fined $25 and Costs For "Doping" Meat

Two men who authorities said were partners in the Public Service Food Market, 26 North George street, were fined $25 and costs yesterday in trial magistrates court for permitting the use of sulphite in hamburger.

They gave their names as George Ossip, 505 Beall street, and Moses R. Sacks, 517 Caroline street, when arraigned before Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr. Both pleaded guilty to the charge.

Sulphite, defined as "salt of sulphurous acid," is used to make meats appear fresh, according to court attaches. Paul M. Fletcher, assistant state's attorney, prosecuted the men.

Manley Asserts Race Meet Helps City Financially

President of Cumberland Fair Association Addresses Rotary Club

Some believe that a race meet, such as Cumberland will have August 5-16 on the "fastest half-mile track in the United States" at Fairgo, takes a lot of money out of the city, like a circus.

But Harry A. Manley, president and general manager of the local fair association, says they are "all wet" because such folks don't stop to think how much money a race meet brings into the city.

Harry made out a good case on that score in addressing Rotarians yesterday at their weekly luncheon at the Port Cumberland hotel by enumerating the numerous items accruing to a community from a race meet—not only financial, but also educational and recreational.

"There is the transportation of owners, trainers, jockeys and horses, as well as necessary equipment," Manley noted. "This is additional business for the transportation lines, and involves the use of large quantities of gasoline and oil, food in large amounts for men and horses; hotels, rooming houses and tourist homes and filled to capacity when otherwise business might be dull. Department stores, drug stores, theaters, restaurants, cafes, bowling alleys and many other small businesses participate in the racing dollars circulated in the community during the meet."

Visitors Increase
"Every year, right here in Cumberland, the number of race fans from distant points increases. These patrons spend money freely, and all transactions are cash. For many of them it is a vacation, and for that reason they spend liberally for clothes, food, beverages and entertainment. Recipients of this money in turn pay the doctor, the dentist and make contributions to the church. In the third turn-over of this money, the savings accounts and checking accounts receive the benefit."

"Manley declared that wholesalers and retailers report that their business takes a sharp rise during the race week.

A large share of the money received at the race meets come back to the people by way of taxes, Manley noted. Since the inception of the Maryland Racing Commission in 1921, he said, Maryland has received nearly $20,000,000 in taxes from the race tracks. In addition, the nine tracks of the state have donated more than $350,000 to Maryland's needy and unemployed.

Expenses Are Heavy
Manley cited a list of expense items for the fair last year to show that not all the receipts are profits by any means:

Advertising	$5,400.00
Insurance	2,491.00
Interest	7,700.00
Taxes	791.49
Premiums	6,897.00
Labor	5,070.00
Racing Expense	70,000.00
State tax	5,622.94
License (county)	500.00
Total	$104,472.43

Other important phases of the race meets, Manley said, are that the race track is a proving or testing ground of the breeding industry; that they enhance interest and enthusiasm in sports and sportsmanlike qualities; and that educational advantages are afforded by competition of farm products, household handicrafts and the various handicrafts. The Cumberland fair has always been first in the state from the standpoint of quality of exhibits, he said.

Fairgo is keeping abreast of the times, Manley said. New equipment and facilities are constantly being added, and all buildings are kept in repair for safety and appearance. Facilities for drinking water have been added, sewerage facilities have been increased, other steps have been taken to preserve the health of patrons; the totalisator, electric starting gates and electric cameras have been installed and this year, for the first time, insurance is provided for the jockeys, who are always exposed to the hazards of injury.

Staff Officials Praised
Manley paid tribute to the high quality of the state race officials (Continued on Page 8, Col. 3.)

SPEAKS ON AIR—Addressing members of the Cumberland Rotary Club yesterday, Harry A. Manley, president and general manager of the Cumberland Fair Association, Inc., enumerated the numerous items accruing to a community from a race meet. He disagreed sharply with those who believe that racing takes a lot of money out of the city, stating that they are "all wet" because such folks don't stop to think how much money a race meet brings into the city.

Coney NYA Boys Leave Job Again

Still Protest Night Shift; Advisory Committee Makes Suggestion

The second walkout in as many days occurred yesterday morning at the National Youth Administration machine shop in Lonaconing as the workers still protested the order which setup a night shift as well as a day turn.

At 11 a. m. yesterday the entire force of workers had either walked out or ceased to work. A conference between a representative group of boys and E. Price Steiding, district area NYA director was held at 3:30 p. m.

Demand Shift Change
The youths protested the order which affected more than fifty boys who were given a steady night shift Monday. The workers demanded a change of shifts, so that each group of workers would work one week on night turn and the following week on day shift.

A meeting of the Advisory committee to NYA projects in Allegany county which is comprised of Steiding, John McCullough, director of national defense training in the county, and Frederick Z. Hetzel, manager of the Cumberland office of the Maryland State Employment Service, was held yesterday afternoon after the meeting with the workers.

Advise Temporary Closing
The committee will make a recommendation to the State Advisory committee that the shop be closed temporarily until some solution is made of the problem.

Steiding said 112 youths are employed at the shop in making defense materials, especially articles for Navy units.
